And it's going to be just as precarious: the increasingly strained U.S. nuclear arsenal, and the risks of escalation between nuclear-armed states. There are two reasons the U.S. is struggling with the growing nuclear threat on this front. One is money—the cost of modernizing the U.S. arsenal is growing, and the American political system can't seem to find a way to pay for it. The other is international diplomacy—the world is getting less generous when it comes to the U.S. nuclear umbrella. If the U.S.
